I want to keep traffic and weather reports on XM because it affords me instant reports just by going to the channel for Washington, D.C. If I have to depend on regular radio, I will have to wait for the report at their convenience, instead of when I want it. I have had XM radio for a month now and I have switched to weather/traffic numerous times for instant updates. This kind of convenience and accuracy should be encouraged, and not legislated out by those who would rather drive out than change to keep up. John T. Proctor
